Project Overview

New York City Community School District 27, in consortium with New York City Community School District 29, is converting five elementary schools into whole-school magnet programs that are unique to and draw on the strengths of the five individual school communities. These five new school choice options provide rigorous educational experiences that promote student achievement and college and career readiness skills. In addition, these Magnet Schools Assistance Program (MSAP)-funded schools are creating diverse learning environments by attracting students from different racial/ethnic and socioeconomic backgrounds – a strategy designed to promote positive interactions and support all learners.
